NEAR BATTLE IN TURIN, ITALY

Ten People Have Been Killed in the Encounters

BOMB WAS THROWN
NEAR POLICE OFFICE

Police and Military Authorities Have Made
No Arrests

Rome, Sept. 23.—Disorders continue at Turin, and rifle firing is sometimes assuming the character of a battle in the outskirts of the city, according to dispatches reaching Rome.

Ten persons have been killed, among them being Mario Santini, president of the Young Men's National association.

A bomb was thrown in San Carlo square, near the central police office, but no one was killed or injured, only nearby buildings being struck by fragments. Police and military authorities have made about 200 arrests.

A resolution passed by the council of the workmen's league, inviting the people to remain calm and not to interfere with negotiations in the metal workers' dispute by acts of violence, is published by the newspaper Avanti.

It appears that the agitation in Turin has been carried on by extremists who do not have the support of the population. Despatches say street cars carrying placards with such inscriptions as "Viva Lenin," "Death to the King" and "Death to the Royal Guards" were surrounded by indignant townspeople when they reached the center of the city.

Conductors were dragged from the cars and beaten and the posters were torn to pieces.

Printers employed by the newspaper Nazione of Turin, have occupied the plant and have announced that they will manage the newspaper themselves.
A fund of 3,000,000 lire is said to have been deposited in a bank to the credit of the men, and there are hints that this money originally came from soviet Russia.

tum of the buying power of the country.

Henry Ford says, "The war is over and it is time war prices were over. There is no sense or wisdom in trying to maintain an artificial standard of values. For the best interests of all, it is time a real practical effort was made to bring the business of the country and the life of the country down to regular pre-war standards."

We are at your command with regular Ford efficiency in service and eagerness to fill your orders.

AMERICAN WOMEN IN DANGER ZONE

Miss Edith Cold of New York Carried White Flag Between Turks and Armenians in Effort to Save Armenian Orphans.

New York, Sept. 24.—Miss Edith Cold of West, New Brighton, S. L. N. Y., tells in a letter to the Near East relief the story of how she carried the white flag between fighting Turks and Armenians in Hadjin in an effort to save Armenian orphans under her care.

Miss Cold's letter, came from Talas, Turkey, in the heart of Mustapha Kemal's country and was brought out by her co-worker, Miss Alice Clark, of Evanston, Ill. Another American refugee worker at Hadjin mentioned by Miss Cold is Mary Spear of Northampton, Pa.

"The Chetaks (Turkish tribesmen) descended on the compound on the outskirts of Hadjin on April 3," Miss Cold wrote. "The compound where the American flag was flying and where no shot was fired became the object of a fierce attack."

"After that for 10 weeks we lived as the guests of the Chetaks. It was not life, however, but a journey in the valley of the shadow of death. We worked ceaselessly at the task of making friends with those encamped about our walls. We served them in every conceivable way, especially Miss Super, with medical aid. Two ladies died from fright and three were wounded.
The Turks had their defenses close to the compound between us and the city and occupied the clinic building outside the gate and always fired from it. The compound was always under fire from Hadjin. Hardly a day passed that we did not have callers from among the leaders of the Chetaks.

"Twice Mr. Eby and I had permission from them to go to Hadjin. Each time they proclaimed an armistice and we carried the white flag. The first time was at the end of three weeks of siege and the other five weeks later. The first time we simply stated the conditions for surrender as given by the commander, Doghan Bey. The committee in Hadjin flatly refused to consider.

"The second time we sought to bring about a conference between the opposing forces. We went back and forth seven times, stating Doghan Bey's position, bringing the Hadjin reply, etc. Everything seemed favorable except that the place of the conference could not be agreed upon. Dog-han Bey insisted that they meet in our Salamuk and the Hadjin committee were equally firm that the place be on our road half-way between the defenses. After much parley, Mr. Eby and I finally set out, however, with two Hadjin delegates. Only an hour of the armistice was left. Just as we were climbing over one of the Hadjin defenses a shot was fired and struck between Mr. Eby and me. The Hadjin delegates ran for shelter and Mr. Eby and I proceeded back to the compound alone. Confidence was destroyed. We were unable to locate the source of the shot."

Miss Cold wrote that the Armenians from Hadjin finally captured the compound from the Turks but were driven out of it and most of the 300 inmates of the compound were sent with the Armenians to Hadjin.

"We six Americans and our two Turkish girls took refuge in a dark storeroom," Miss Cold added. When the Chetaks again recovered the compound, they looted and set fire to it.
Miss Cold and the other Americans were hurried away by the Turks to a mountain retreat, where for two nights they were guests in the commander's tent and then were given a escort to Talas.

The fate of the Armenian children in Hadjin was unknown to Miss Cold but she feared that all had perished.
